The Eastern Transportation Coalition

The Eastern Transportation Coalition is a partnership of 17 states and D.C. focused on connecting public agencies across modes of travel to increase safety and efficiency.

Formerly the I-95 Corridor Coalition, the organization started as an informal group of transportation professionals working together to manage highway incidents that impacted travel across state lines. In the past 25 years the Eastern Transportation Coalition has evolved from a small, highway-focused group to more than 200 public agencies working together to address the pressing challenges facing the eastern corridor with a focus on Transportation Systems Management & Operations, Freight, and Innovation.

Today the Coalition represents the world's second largest economy and nearly 40% of the nation's GDP. The Eastern Transportation Coalition connects members with the data, people, resources and tools needed to create solutions and get them across the finish line.
